

Load Data Logger (DG-DL-L-Cxx), is a microprocessor based electronic instrument that is designed to accept and record load data. The instrument measures the input signal, processes it and displays the measured parameter on a 20x4 LCD display (Also available with touchscreen). Up to Thirty-two channels may be provided. The channels may be displayed in a sequential manner or may be selected manually, by providing the appropriate command from the keyboard (With Touchscreen: All the channels are displayed simultaneously). Store Interval, real time, and Channel Configuration are software programmable.

The built-in real-time clock is provided to put the time stamp on measured data. The measured data of all the channels may be transferred to PC through an RS-232C link/USB on store interval with the time stamp on appropriate command. Data may be captured on PC in a suitable format to import data into Excel. Optional PC-based software may be provided to display and store serial data on PC for further analysis. The unit is mains operated and portable. The unit is supplied with suitable accessories.
